James, However, Refuses To Give Names of Those He Has Chosen

NOW IN PHILADELPHIA

To Speak Tonight at Dinner Honoring Harold C. Pike

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5—Governor-elect Arthur James, whose inauguration is less than two weeks away, today continued conferences in his Philadelphia hotel headquarters with Pennsylvania Republican leaders.

Despite persistent reports that he has selected all but three members of his cabinet, the jurist maintains his refusal to disclose any of the appointments he will make.

It was reliably stated, however, that Judge James would begin announcing his selections before the middle of next week.

Judge James will be principal speaker tonight at a dinner honoring Harold C. Pike, of Elkins Park, for 35 years in service as an official of Cheltenham Township, Montgomery County.

Uncle Sam Cracks Down On Bootleg Ring Members

By International News Service

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 5—Uncle Sam had cracked down today on 12 members of a bootleg liquor ring who failed to pay fines imposed on them following their conviction in the Federal Court of Philadelphia last Spring.

The defendants were members of what the government charged was a $20,000,000 post- repeal liquor conspiracy through which the Internal Revenue Department was defrauded of more than $1,000,000 in taxes on alcoholic beverages.

Five of the defendants, including Harry C. Staub of Upper Darby and Benny Carfa of Chester, were sentenced to from one to eight months imprisonment, and six of the others were given one week in which to pay up. The twelfth paid his fine and was permitted by Judge Albert B. Maris to remain at liberty on probation.

Staub must serve six months, and Carfa one month.

Gus Avella, of Bristol, alleged leader of the 100 persons arrested in connection with the ring's activity in manufacturing, selling and transporting of liquor in this state, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, was fined $10,000. Avella is now serving a two-year prison term in a Federal penitentiary.

Those sentenced to jail in addition to Staub and Carfa were three Philadelphians, Mike Gerson, Nicholas Paparino, and Joseph Cresson. All five pleaded poverty prevented them from making good the fines, and begged for more time.

Assistant U. S. Attorney Gerald A. Gleason insisted, however, that they should be jailed, declaring "they were well enough satisfied with the sentences when they were imposed, because they knew they were light, but they thought they could just pass them by and get away with it."

Judge Maris who imposed the fines originally, agreed and emphasized that other convicted bootleggers must either "pay up or go to jail."

LOWER BUCKS TO BE SERVED BY PHILA. OFFICE

Social Security Board Announces Changes for Bucks and Montgomery Counties

SERVICE IMPROVEMENT

For the convenience of residents of the southern half of Bucks and Montgomery counties having business to transact with the Social Security Board, these areas have been added to the district served from Philadelphia, it was announced today by Michael J. Shortley, manager of the Board's Philadelphia office.

Under the new alignment of territory, all matters relating to the Old-Age Insurance provisions of the Social Security Act will be handled by the Philadelphia office of the Board for residents of the area added to the Philadelphia service district.

Heretofore, the Allentown office of the Board has serviced all of Bucks County, and the Reading office has serviced all of Montgomery County.

The realignment, Mr. Shortley said, was effected because of the Board's desire to conduct its administration more closely in line with established transportation and mail facilities and the preference of the affected people.

The primary effects of the change of service area will be to transfer the issuance of Social Security account number cards and the handling and preparation of Old-Age Insurance claims to the Philadelphia office, Mr. Shortley explained.

"It is especially important that employers, who have previously sent their 'Statement of Employer' to other Board offices, send them now to the Philadelphia office, 1206 Widener Building, Chestnut and Juniper streets, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania," Mr. Shortley said, and added:

"The 'Statement of Employer' is the form which an employer fills out when an employee attains age 65 or dies. These should be sent to the proper office in order that benefits can be paid promptly to persons who become eligible to file Old-Age Insurance claims.

"Under the Old-Age Insurance provisions of the Social Security Act, single cash benefits are being paid now to workers attaining age 65 and to the close relatives or estates of workers who die. In all cases, these payments equal 3 1/2 per cent of the wages the worker has received in covered employment after 1936 and before attainment of age 65 or death.

"In addition to handling problems specifically concerned with the Old-Age Insurance provisions, the Philadelphia office will be prepared to disseminate general information on the various other phases of the Social Security Act."

New Britain and Plumstead Townships are included in and form the northern border of the Bucks County area added to the Philadelphia service district. All civil divisions south of these townships were made a part of the Philadelphia area. They are: Tullytown, Falls Township, Morrisville, Lower Makefield Township, Yardley, Upper Makefield Township, Solebury Township, New Hope, Bristol Borough, Bristol Township, Hulmeville, Middletown Township, Newtown Borough, Langhorne Manor, Langhorne, South Langhorne, Bensalem Township, Lower Southampton Township, Northampton Township, Ivyland, Upper Southampton Township, Warminster Township, Warwick Township, Wrightstown Township, Warrenton Township, Chalfont, Doylestown Township, Doylestown Borough, Buckingham Township, and New Britain Borough.

Upper Merion, West Norriton, Worcester and Twamencin Townships and Hatfield Borough are included in and form the northern border of the Montgomery County area added to the Philadelphia service district. ## Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Three men narrowly missed death yesterday when a truck cut down a telephone pole and tree in Morrisville and was destroyed by fire.

The vehicle, driven by Tony Pintarelli, of Brooklyn, went out of control as it entered the borough on West Bridge street. It jumped a curb, sheared a pole and hurtled against a large tree. The truck went part way up the tree and the tree snapped.

Pintarelli and two companions, Rubin Finkel and Paul Sugarman, both of Brooklyn, crawled out of the cab as the vehicle burst into flame. Finkel suffered a possible broken ankle. The other two were unhurt.

Patrolman Andrew Thompson investigated. No arrest was made. Pintarelli told Thompson he lost control when the truck struck a rut or stone. The vehicle had no cargo. Pintarelli had delivered a load of furniture to Richmond, Va., and was enroute home when the crash occurred.

The Union and Capitol View Fire Companies extinguished the blaze. The truck, however, was reduced to charred wreckage.

A. T. Lynch was re-elected president of Union Fire Company at Morrisville at its annual meeting this week in the fire house on South Pennsylvania avenue, Morrisville.

Other officers chosen included: Vice-president, George Kice; recording secretary, Charles C. Hable; financial secretary, George Sanford; treasurer, Joseph Hibbs; chief, Frank Miller; foreman, Thomas Moore; first assistant foreman, Robert Chase; second assistant foreman, Walter Harm; chief driver, Walter Neumann; assistant driver, Joseph Hibbs; trustees, Jacob Romig, Joseph Dennis, William Hensor; delegates to State Association, Joseph Hibbs; delegates to Bucks County Association, Frank Cowell, John Strubbe, Frank Woolston, Charles Davis and Walter Harm; representatives to Firemen's Relief Association, Robert Wenner, A. T. Lynch, Walter Neumann and Charles C. Hable.

Officers of the Quakertown sub-station of Pennsylvania Motor Police during 1938 investigated 96 accidents in which 12 people were killed and 101 injured in the upper-end section of the county under patrol by officers of that sub-station.

Automobile damage in the territory covered amounted to $12,391 in 1938 while property damage amounted to $535. Miles covered by automobile by the officers numbered 73,895 in addition to 3373 miles by motorcycle and 257 by foot. There were 659 arrests in 1938.

Speeders topped the list of violators with a total of 110 passenger car drivers and 97 truck drivers. There was $11,000, there is included $500 for sewer plans already furnished, donations to the poor, maintenance of Borough Hall, shade tree commission, board of health, garbage collection and street lights. The latter item is $6,900.

The budget for the water department calls for $23,900 from the scheduled water rents, and $3,000 from metered water rents.

The expenditures include $4,925 for new water mains and taps; $950 for a new truck; $5,300 for operators' wages; $3,800 for electric power; $1,200 for repairs to plant, and $2,500 for administration.

From the money received for the sinking fund, together with what is on hand, it is planned to pay off $22,500 in bonds during the year and $4,147.84 in interest.

HINT SHAKE-UP ON BURLINGTON FORCE

Naming of Police Officers is Deferred at Meeting of City Council

NAME OTHER OFFICIALS

BURLINGTON, N. J., Jan. 5—The probability of a drastic shakeup in the municipal police force was foreseen as a result of failure of Burlington Common Council to reappoint the captain and sergeant of police at its annual organization meeting held in City Hall here Tuesday night.

All past officers with the exception of the police captain and sergeant, and the city engineer, were reappointed. City officials refused to comment on the situation, stating simply that the appointments were being held over until a later date.

Mayor Thomas J. Johnson is chief of the police department, but the majority of the administrative details are handled by the one captain and the one sergeant on the 11-man force.

Captain George Boley, a veteran of many years on the force who has been captain for the past four or five years, is one of the two who were not re-named. The other is Sergeant Clarence Bennett.

Samuel R. Probasco, who previously held the offices of both city engineer and superintendent of drainage, was reappointed only to the latter position.

At the organization meeting, Cornelius J. Glickin was unanimously chosen president. The president pro tem will be William Ferry, who is to serve until the adjourned meeting to be held next Tuesday night, when President Glickin will announce his committees for the year.

A temporary budget totaling $25,372 was approved.

City officials reappointed include: Charles Lusas, as street commissioner; G. Percy Becker, director of welfare; B. H. Brewer, building inspector; Frank Lowden, court warden; William J. Sullivan, superintendent of fire alarms; Samuel R. Probasco, superintendent of drainage; Miss Frances Woolman, secretary to Probasco; Harold Stevens, sergeant-at-arms; Edward Conrow, regulator of town clock; Frank Perry, curator of City Hall; A. R. McConnell, park guard; William Hancock and Ralph Gares, ambulance drivers; city solicitor, for a three-year term, Thomas D. Begley, and committee magistrate, J. Leedom Smith.

MORRISVILLE COUNCIL OUTLINES 1939 BUDGET

As Outlined is For Total of $39,000 for General Borough Purposes

TO BUY NEW SCRAPER

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 5—Morrisville council is planning, in rounding out its budget for 1939, to purchase a new road scraper, to replace the one now in use, and which is 12 years old.

The budget is for a total of $39,000 for general borough purposes.

The building of permanent streets has a place on the budget, the estimate being $8,000, with repairing of other streets being figured at $4100.

Before the final adoption, provision may also be made for the purchase of a police car and electric traffic lights.

In the water works department, operated entirely on receipts from the sale of water, provision is also made for the purchase of a new ton-and-a-half truck.

While the borough tax rate will be 13 1/2 mills, which includes sinking funds and fire protection, only eight mills is used for general borough work. These receipts include $26,000 estimated from taxes; $3,000 from fines; $1,000 from beer and liquor licenses; $2,500 from water works for pipe privileges, and $3,000 as a transfer from water account. The borough is also anticipating $2,100 from the property owners on streets where improvements were made and temporarily paid for by the borough.

The estimated expenses of the street department is given at $14,460. The budget provides $5,510 for the police department. The administrative department calls for $4,000.

Under miscellaneous, which provides $11,000, there is included $500 for sewer plans already furnished, donations to the poor, maintenance of Borough Hall, shade tree commission, board of health, garbage collection and street lights. The latter item is $6,900.

The budget for the water department calls for $23,900 from the scheduled water rents, and $3,000 from metered water rents.

The expenditures include $4,925 for new water mains and taps; $950 for a new truck; $5,300 for operators' wages; $3,800 for electric power; $1,200 for repairs to plant, and $2,500 for administration.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

(Copyright, 1938, by The Baltimore Sun)

In The Tradition

Washington, Jan. 3. In selecting Ex-Gov. Frank Murphy of Michigan for Attorney General, the President was obliged to inflict upon what has become known as the White House "inner circle" a bitter disappointment. If, as is now predicted, he follows this up by naming a Westerner for the Cardozo vacancy on the Supreme Bench, he will inflict another even more grievous.

BECAUSE there were two things upon which the young gentlemen of the advisory group had set their hearts—the appointment of Mr. Robert H. Jackson to the Cabinet post and Dr. Felix Frankfurter as Supreme Court justice. Their reasons were well understood. Mr. Jackson is actually one of them, while Dr. Frankfurter has been their guide, counselor, sponsor and friend, the man chiefly responsible for their presence in Washington.

THE interesting thing is that Mr. Roosevelt himself preferred the choice of the Corcorans and Cohens in both cases, but was deflected by political reasons which seemed too strong to disregard. In the case of Mr. Jackson there is no doubt that he had made up his mind to appoint him. But in the last few days he had to weigh several things in addition to the fact that the Jackson selection would place too many members of his Cabinet in New York. That alone would not have blocked the young Solicitor General who was the logical man for the job and whose New Dealism as well as personal loyalty is without flaw.

BUT THE other reasons that favored Mr. Murphy were too potent. Continued On Page Five

WILLING TO SUPPORT CHILDREN BUT NOT WIFE

John H. Mullins Acts As His Own Attorney Before Bucks County Court

BLAMES MOTHER-IN-LAW

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 5—Two Bucks county judges were kept busy yesterday hearing a half dozen cases and various problems facing them concerning domestic infelicity. One defendant told the Court that he would support his children but would sit in prison for the rest of his life rather than support his wife.

The hot-tempered defendant, who was a past master in the art of public speaking, and who served as his own attorney, reserving and waiving the right of this and that, was John H. Mullins, of Hulmeville, who claimed that his married affairs have been tampered with too much by a mother-in-law.

Mullins' case was heard before Judge Calvin S. Boyer. He was arrested on the information of his wife, Catherine, whom he married 15 years.

PLAN TO ORGANIZE FIRST-AID COUNCIL FOR PENNSYLVANIA

State-Wide Association Could Be Called Upon In Times of Catastrophe

MEETING TO BE HELD

Bucks County Rescue Squad Is Backing State-Wide Movement

The Bucks County Rescue Squad, in visioning the near future, is outlining plans for organization of a Pennsylvania First Aid Council, a state-wide association which can be called upon in times of catastrophe, and modeled somewhat after the New Jersey First Aid Council.

The date of Tuesday, January 10th, has been set, for organization of the state council, which is to be composed of delegates from all rescue squads in the state. When organization is perfected, it is announced that the officials of the same, in time of a major catastrophe will be able to broadcast summons for rescue and first-aid workers from the many squads throughout the commonwealth, having at command scores of ambulances and assistants.

The Bucks County Rescue Squad, which has two first-aid stations in lower Bucks County, is also in the process of reorganization, and is looking forward to the locating in strategic spots in other parts of the county of additional stations for care of the injured.

At least three more stations are contemplated, with points for two tentatively given as Morrisville and Croydon Manor. The one to be located in Croydon Manor will be placed on Bristol Pike, being merely a first-aid station for accident cases, with those in charge calling upon Croydon station for ambulance service, etc. As the other two stations' work increases, it is possible that ambulances will be purchased for service at those points.

The Bucks County Squad thus hopes to eventually serve the entire county, the need for such service being realized through growth of activity and calls at the Parkland and Croydon stations now.

In addition to accident cases, many other cases of transportation from homes to hospital and vice versa, are received.

In the reorganization of the Squad a governing body is to be formed, the county squad to be composed of the various units. The new units are expected to be housed within the next two months. At present there are three ambulances, one new one at Parkland, and two at Croydon.

The president of the squad, Robert McGovern, Croydon Manor, was recently re-elected to that office.

The reorganization session of the squad will be held on Thursday evening, January 19th.

JITTERY

In recent referenda by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, growers of rice, and of barley, flue-cured and dark types of tobacco
decided against AAA market control through quotas. Although no other question was involved, Secretary Wallace, of the Department of Agriculture, seems to think the whole system of farm regimentation needed defense.

So out of Washington came a lengthy circular "for immediate release," with a statement from the Secretary that the foundations of the AAA were still secure. The farmers were congratulated on the "orderly manner and fairness with which the referenda were conducted." Also there was the conjecture that "undoubtedly many of the farmers who voted against the quotas for 1939 in the cotton, tobacco and rice referenda, approve other phases of the AAA programs."

One gains the impression that Mr. Wallace is getting sensitive about his AAA enterprise. Would anyone expect American farmers to riot during a referendum or to conduct themselves in any other than an orderly manner and with fairness? And why assume that those voting in the referendum approve other phases of the AAA? The other phases were not in question. Is it just possible that the November elections produced a degree of jitter down Washington way?

NIX, GEORGE

His Excellency, George H. Earle
III, whose bizarre reign of four years as Governor of Pennsylvania has cost the taxpayers a cool billion dollars—twice as much as the four years of his predecessor—pilots an airplane in the same manner that he ran the ship of the Keystone State.

Although a week has passed since George last crashed, injuring three,
a word of advice to His Excellency George. The latest plane wrecked by the Governor was purchased out of state gasoline tax receipts and cost $15,000. He took a joy ride in it to South America last fall and got back all right because he had another pilot, who was also on the state payroll.

Fourteen times in his flying carrier of three years' duration the Governor has crashed. He will be forced to rest on his gubernatorial laurels after January 17, when his successor will begin the task of unraveling the mess at Harrisburg, including a $100,000,000 deficit, and he ought to begin to rest on his flying laurels now. His antics in the air are of dubious help in selling the proposition of a winged era just ahead.

Police in Chicago can find no trace of 200-pound covers removed to report on British foreign policy.

The Duce's shave has become so

"ENVOY EXTRAORDINARY"
by E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

CHAPTER XIV

"I beg your lordship's pardon," the old butler announced, "but Dr. Andrews assured me that the message was an urgent one. Will you speak to him for a minute."

"May I ask to be excused for a moment?" Matresser begged. "You all know your way about, I think.
Don't hurry them off, Bemrose, but I daresay the ladies would like some bridge. There's the billiard room going, too, and the radio. I shall only be a few minutes. Andrews seems to want a little advice."

"Is it that I can be of any assistance?" Mr. van Westreene asked, and if it was possible for expression to creep into his steely voice there was a certain wistful-ness in it.

Matresser shook his head.
"It is merely an official decision,
I expect," he replied. "I am chairman of the Bench of Magistrates for this division of the County and Andrews naturally does not want to make a mistake."

The doctor was without a doubt suffering badly from nerves. He was walking up and down Matresser's den when the latter entered, still wearing the clothes in which he had started the day's shooting, and by this time presenting a more or less disheveled appearance.

"My dear fellow," Matresser remonstrated, "what on earth's the matter with you?"

His visitor made an obvious attempt to pull himself together and sank into the easy chair which Matresser had wheeled out for him.

"It's a rotten business, this,
Matresser," he exclaimed. "It gets worse every minute I think of it."

"Well, let's talk it over sensibly.
Whiskey and soda, eh? And light
your pipe."

Matresser supplied his guest's wants and sat on the edge of the table by his side.

"Now, fire away," he enjoined.
"Your patient has stolen a march on us, I gather, and pegged out unexpectedly."

"He was dead when I got home."
"And you are worrying about having left him?"

"It's not only that. Frankly, I cannot understand it. I did all the usual things when he was first brought in—temperature, pulse,
blood pressure—and I put him down
as a strong man able to stand a tap on the head like he received,
sleep off easily with a mild sedative, which is all that I gave him, and he none the worse for it in two or three days time. When they fetched me back from Otley Wood
this afternoon, he was one dead
and certain entirely new symptoms
must have developed during the day.
Well, I telephoned to the hospital
at Norwich and got Ridgeway out.
He was here within an hour and a half and at first he was just as puzzled as I was. There was apparently not the slightest reason why the man should have died."

"And then?"
"Well, we took off his clothes and there were evidences of a puncture high up on his arm. Ridgeway could not tell what had been infected any more than I could, but there were other conditions of the body which made it absolutely necessary to have an autopsy."

"Well, there's no need for you to worry yourself to death," Matresser consoled him. "No one is going to accuse you of carelessness. You didn't give him that particular injection I don't suppose."

"Not likely," the doctor exclaimed
scornfully. "Look here, Matresser, this is the devil of it. Mrs. Foulds had washed his neck and arms when we put him to bed on Monday. The injection must have been administered since then and Ridgeway and I both believe—" the doctor hesitated.

"You believe that he died from the effects of the injection?"
"We do."

"In short that he was murdered."
"I'm afraid that is the truth of
it."

"Very well, then let's face the facts," Matresser continued, with a cheerfulness which was not without its effect upon his listener. "We will rule you and Mrs. Foulds out of it. The possibilities seem to be myself or that someone else who drove by in a car without any lights while we were on our way to see the fellow. Supposing you rule me out for a moment, as might seem not unreasonable, then there is only that person who nearly succeeded in running us down. Is there any evidence to connect him with any human being we know of?"

"Not the slightest," was the doctor's almost savage reply.
"Well, there you are then," Ma-tresser observed. "We have a local police force. There is no necessity for you or for me to go playing the amateur detective. Leave it to the police. There will have to be an inquest, of course."

"I suppose so," the doctor as-
ented. "But Matresser—"

"Well?"
"You will have to be one of the witnesses."

"Naturally. So will you for that matter."

"What are we going to say about that car?"

"Just what we know—what we saw and heard. It doesn't amount to much, does it?"

"You think we ought to mention
it?"

"My dear fellow," Matresser reminded him. "An inquest is a place where you are on your oath. Of course we must mention it."

The room was by no means overheated, but Andrews was wiping the sweat from his forehead. He groaned as he became aware that his companion had noticed his discomfort.

"I can't help it, Matresser," he burst out. "The only person I know of who has a small car and who might have been going in that direction is Mademoiselle Stamier."

"Is that all that's troubling you?"
Matresser asked.

"Not by any means," the doctor went on, volubly enough now that the ice was broken. "The fellow was bringing a letter or papers or a message here for you. His name may have been Fergus but he looked like a foreigner and in the eyes of the people round here he was a foreigner. The only other person likely to have been out in a motor car was Mademoiselle Stamier. She also is a foreigner. The car that was being driven dangerously along this road must have been going either to the port or the Great House. If I am put on my oath I shall have to remember that I have known Mademoiselle Stamier driving without lights before."

"What became of the remainder of the things that were found in the fellow's pockets?" Matresser asked.

"The police have them."

"There was nothing beyond the fact that I knew who he was to identify him, then?"

"Nothing."

"You didn't at any time ask him
his real name, for instance?"

The doctor shook his head.
"I was not sufficiently interested,"
he admitted.

Matresser glanced at the clock.
"I shall have to be off, Andrews,"
he said. "My opinion is that you are making a mountain out of a molehill. The man is dead and what you have to do is just to pull yourself together, face the questions you have to answer like a man and answer them truthfully. I am not anxious to have this thing linked up with the Great House. I can tell you, but it is one of those times when we have to tell the truth. There's no harm can come to you at any rate."

"Or to you, Matresser."

"Or to Mademoiselle Elisabeth Stamier," Matresser declared. "You can make your mind quite easy
about that."

The doctor drew a long breath of relief.

Matresser, notwithstanding his long absence from such duties, proved himself an excellent after-dinner host. He saw that the bridge tables were going smoothly, finished rather brilliantly a snooker match for Bemrose, who had been called to an odd three at contract with the Dean and his wife and the clergyman of the parish. Presently, when the local guests had mostly taken their leave, he wandered into the smaller drawingroom adjoining his mother's boudoir where Elisabeth was playing the piano. He motioned her to continue and sank into a chair by his mother's side.

"Debussy," he murmured. "What a touch! Shall we listen?"

His mother nodded. He took her fragile fingers in his and stroked them softly. Presently the melody faded away.

"Do go on," he begged.
"If you wish that I play seriously," she said, "I must fetch my music. You excuse—yes?"

"Of course, my dear," Lady Ma-tresser acquiesced. "You are giving us so much pleasure. We shall be here waiting for you."

She smiled and disappeared
through the parted curtains—an exquisitely graceful figure in her simply cut white satin gown.

"You were satisfied today, Ronnie?" his mother asked a little anxiously.

"More than satisfied, my dear," he assured her. "I took all the outside I could and I couldn't find a single spot where the shoot has been neglected in any way. Humphreys seems to me to be just as good as he was ten years ago and both his sons are capital fellows."

"Because if you were really going to settle down—and you are,"
she insisted, "you must have your shooting perfect. You know there's nothing to prevent it. You have been drawing absolutely no income
at all for the last two or three years.
Mr. Purvis tells me that you keep him quite busy investing."

"Capital!" Matresser exclaimed.
"We'll show them something when we start entertaining, mother."

"Bemrose is looking forward to that time, I can tell you," she went on. "It has been rather hard on him
the last few years. An expensive family, too, and three unmarried daughters. I know when your father had the County, and that was before my money came into the family, he used to find that it squeezed him.
Who was this mysterious stranger,
Ronald, who came and died upon us,
or rather upon poor Doctor Andrews?"

"No one knows for certain," he told her, "but between ourselves I believe he came here to see me—
rather, to bring me an invitation.
In the language of Humphreys he was a 'furriner.' It shows what a self enclosed county we are—everyone who looks or dresses a little differently is a 'furriner.'"

"The most remarkable 'furriner'
you have produced here for a very long time is your Dutchman," the Countess observed. "I can't believe he is real, half the time. He is so enormous, so unbending and so precise. How is it one has not heard of him before?"

"I never saw him myself until the night of the storm," Matresser confided. "He has been spending the last eight or ten years, he told me, cruising. After I had asked him to dine, I wondered whether I ought to have told him that we should be wearing tails."

"He looked the picture of civilization tonight," Lady Matresser observed.

"Might have been turned out for a royal dinner party," Matresser agreed. "Clever fellow to carry a wardrobe as comprehensive as that on a fifty-ton ketch."

"Did you know anything about him, Ronnie, before you asked him
to dine?"

"Not a thing. That's the worst of having a son reappear from the wilds. I suppose I ought not to have done such a thing. He came to pay his respects, which, after all, is the courteous thing to do—if a little un-English—but the harbor is mine, the port and all the rest of it, and it seemed so natural to ask him to shoot, and nearly everyone who shoots at Matresser's dines. So there you are!"

"My dear, don't think for a moment that I was criticizing," his mother protested with a delightful sigh. "It was sheer curiosity. As a matter of fact, everyone was saying that a marvelous shot he was."

POSTER CONTEST MOST EAGERLY AWAITED IN CO.

Many New "Kindness to Animals" Clubs Organized in Bucks County

CONSERVATION SOARS

Bucks County Humane Club continued its work in schools well into December, with new Kindness Clubs organized, and children looking forward to the Kindness to Animals Poster Contest, soon to be announced, for 1939.

From the December Humane Review comes much of interest along the lines of conservation of wild life, with a most interesting story by Miss Frances Clarke, of Grey Owl, who some say was an Apache, others, an Ojibwa, Indian. Born in 1888, in the Rio Grande section, Grey Owl's Indian name was Wa-Sha-Quon-Ash, and his Scotch name (he was half Scotch) was Archie MacNeil.

As a boy, he hunted and trapped on the Western plains, with other Indians of his tribe, and is said to have known Buffalo Bill (when a very small boy). In search of better hunting and trapping, Grey Owl travelled to Canada, where the beaver then was vanishing. One day he befriended a badly wounded beaver, and seeing its suffering touched his heart, and he became a friend and helper to the animals which he had formerly hunted and trapped. He served in the World War, and at its close, returned to Canada, where in spite of the ridicule of others, he went to work to help the animals. He was particularly interested in the beaver, and after working alone for some time, he secured the approval and co-operation of the Canadian government. He was placed in charge of a newly-established beaver sanctuary, in Riding Mountain National Park in Manitoba. To this sanctuary he brought two of his beaver friends, which he called Jellyroll and Rawhide. They had been his friends, as had many other beaver, for many years, and came at his call. Although beaver may not live in captivity, hundreds of them learned to know this human friend and proved the remarkable intelligence and friendliness of this animal.

Grey Owl later did considerable traveling in Canada, the United States, also England, lecturing about his friends, also writing articles for magazines and several books. In April, 1938, this friend of the "Little People" died quite suddenly, at the age of 50, and is buried in the beaver sanctuary, which he helped to establish. Like the well-known and loved St. Francis Assisi, Grey Owl proved what kindness and understanding will do for the so-called "wild" animals.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture reports some interesting facts as to the results of its study of what are called "predators," and tells us that the destruction of some of these unfortunate creatures may be mistaken zeal, as it has been found certain of these much disliked creatures, including the skunk, which certainly cannot claim popularity, should really be numbered as allies of the farmers, and not enemies. This animal has been recognized as valuable for some time in New York State, and received protection there. It protects especially the hop vines, ridding them of destructive pests. And it is claimed to be a great destroyer here of the Japanese beetle, so may well be our friend too. Also are mentioned by the Department, certain kinds of hawks, known to prey on the pocket mice, which are hard to control. So possibly, after all, Nature knows best how to control her children, and needs little, or no help from man, who only thinks he knows.

For the year just past, a large Humane Society in Pennsylvania, reports having handled cases of cruelty or neglect of children, to the number of 1148, old persons 51, and animals over 117,000... these including domestic, farm animals, zoos, cattle cars, etc. This is but one of many organizations working for humans and animals.

NEW FACES IN POLITICS

Culbert L. Olson
Governor-Elect of California

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 5—(INS)—Bent on a thorough housecleaning of state government, and promising a new deal to the taxpayer, small business man, and workman, Los Angeles County's State Senator Culbert L. Olson, Democratic Governor-elect of California, is now in Sacramento making a first-hand study of state problems preparatory to supplanting Republican Frank F. Merriam in the governor's chair on January 1.

An ardent New Dealer, first Democrat to be elected governor of California in 40 years, Olson is wholly out of sympathy with everything that characterized "the reactionary and moribund Merriam regime" and contemplates drastic changes from the word go.

"A generation of Republican rule in California has brought about a condition intolerable alike to the taxpayer and the family on relief, to the businessman and the worker," he declares, and asserts his intention of "giving the state back to the people."

"The functions of government have been perverted, responsibility has been evaded, the democratic process has been subverted, natural assets of the state have been given away, and public money has been wasted by the Republican dynasty," he charges.

"The people have been defrauded, their needs defeated, their requests disregarded. Privileged interests have been well served and have profited richly at the state's expense. State offices have become their agencies, executives their lobbyists. It's high time to put a halt to these proceedings."

"There must be a real change—not a mere nominal or partisan change—in the character of our state government."

As a New Dealer, Olson claims to have been ahead of his time, asserting that as far back as 1920, at the San Francisco Democratic National Convention which nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for vice-president, he called upon the party to adopt most of the principles later embraced in the New Deal.

"Anticipating economic and political reforms that were to become vital a generation later," he urged such New Deal stand-bys as government ownership, excess profits taxes, regulation of agriculture and industry, collective bargaining, and recognition of the rights and dignity of labor.

These are all a part of his political creed today, together with such later New Deal features as have been developed by years of economic adversity—farm and home loans, old age benefits and pensions, self-help co-operatives for the unemployed, state and national aid for the little business man, industrial harmony between employer and employee, and equal social, political and economic opportunities for all citizens.

At 62, tall and sturdy of physique, quiet and temperate in manner, distinguished and rugged in appearance, Olson looks every inch the part of a statesman. His wavy, silver hair contrasts sharply with his ruddy, sun-burned features; his eyes have a snap and sparkle that reflect an alert, capable mind.

Even his bitterest political critics concede that he is able, honest, straight-forward, humane and hard-working. He has been called the most outstanding statesman of recent years in the state legislature, where, during his four years of service, he gained especial note as the foe, almost single-handed, of oil interests which sought, he insisted, to hi-jack state-owned oil resources.

He was state chairman of the Democratic party in 1936, supporting Roosevelt, who, in turn, stoutly backed him in the recent California election.

During his campaign, Olson declared himself in favor of the $30-Every-Thursday pension plan submitted to the voters as a referendum measure, but when the President issued a strong pronouncement against the scheme he revised his outlook, asserting that old age pensions were a national, not a state, concern.

Answering recent charges of the Dies Investigating Committee that he had an un-American slant and a tinge of "red," Olson says that he anticipated such accusations in his campaign, warning voters to "look out for radios screaming 'Stop Olson, the spy of Stalin!'" and newspaper headlines crying "Olson Eats With Knife Bought with Moscow Gold!"

"When an opponent can't present any qualifications of his own," he said, "his last resort is to start calling names."

His mother, he points out, is as American as any woman could be, a descendant of a delegate to the Constitutional Convention and signer of the Constitution. She was a pioneer in the cause of woman's suffrage, an editorial writer for the Woman's Advocate, contributor to other feminist magazines. His father was a Danish immigrant.

He was born on a Utah farm, educated at a Utah university, and was city editor of the Ogden Daily Standard. He later went to Washington as a newspaper correspondent, studied law there, and completed his studies at the University of Michigan.

He practiced in Utah for 19 years, became prominent in civic and commercial life, developed new mining projects, built hotels in Idaho and Nevada, and organized two banks.

In the Utah State Senate and later in the California Senate, where he represented almost half the total population of the state in Los Angeles County, he established a record as a fearless, honest champion of all causes for the advancement of public welfare and the common interests of the people.

His son Richard, who is also his law partner in Los Angeles, is likewise prominent in Democratic state and national affairs. Two other sons, twins, are students at the University of Southern California.

Carl T. Curtis

Congressman-Elect from Nebraska
LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 5—(INS)—In Carl T. Curtis, of Minden, Neb., Nebraska's newly-elected Congressman from the fourth district, is a former Democrat who had the nerve to turn Republican because he disapproved New Deal policies.

He changed his party affiliation early in 1937 when the New Deal was at its peak and when it looked like all things were reserved for Democrats. His district at the time was represented by a Democrat, A. C. Blinderup, a fellow townsman whom Curtis defeated last November eighth.

Curtis is 33, a lawyer, son of a pioneer farm family in his district, which is in south central Nebraska. His great-grandfather farmed in Kearney County, in which Minden is situated. His father's people were Swedish, his mother's largely English.

Curtis was born on a farm. He was graduated from Minden High School and attended the University of Nebraska Wesleyan University. He was admitted to the bar in 1930. He taught school at Danbury, Neb., and was later principal of the elementary school at Minden. He is now president of the Minden Chamber of Commerce. He is a former Kearney County attorney.

A portly man, he didn't let his weight interfere with his campaigning. His opponent conducted a "circus" campaign, monopolizing the headlines but Curtis nevertheless fought back vigorously.

He made his first speech when the temperature was 107. His last was with the mercury below freezing at Superior, Neb. He spoke in 164 towns, traveled 22 miles.

In him Congress will have a high-tariff advocate for farm products, an opponent of the program of scarcity and an opponent of foreign entanglements. He favors steps to increase the farmers' supply of livestock. That, he says, is the real way to solve the farm surplus problem. He wants government loans for farm surpluses but without the necessity of complying with government control of the farm or acreage reduction.

"We cannot continue to increase our national debt," he says. "We cannot squander our way to prosperity."

He is an advocate of local handling of relief.
He has a wife, also a former school teacher, and a daughter, 2½.

George Heinke

Congressman-Elect from Nebraska
LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 5—(INS)—George Heinke, newly-elected Republican Congressman from the first Nebraska district (southeast Nebraska), Congress will have one of the most militant foes of the AAA that the farm belt has yet feared to oppose Secretary Wallace's farm theories.

Heinke's whole political philosophy of the past few years has been based on a thorough damning for the AAA. The 1938 AAA is "one of the most asinine pieces of legislation placed upon our books in 150 years," Heinke said during his campaign.

If elected, he pledged, he would vote for repeal of the AAA "and all other acts that regiment either agriculture, industry or labor." Heinke promised his campaign would not be a "whispering" one. It wasn't. He shouted his condemnation of AAA from the house-tops.

In a state badly hit by drought for four successive years, his farm theories took hold.

Heinke, 55, served 12 years as Otoe County Attorney. In 1936 he headed the Otoe County Republican Committee which turned in a majority for Landon. Early this year he aided in formation of the Grain Belt Liberty League, pledged to fight the AAA.

The rest of his platform included economy in government, reducing taxes, balancing the budget, encouraging co-operation between labor, industry and capital, and protection from foreign competition.

He was born on a farm near Dunbar, Neb., and was graduated from the University of Nebraska College of Law.

For election he defeated Congressman Henry Luckey (D), of Lincoln, Neb., by 350 votes.

RIDER ALUMNI PLANS THREE-DAY HOMECOMING

Attendance for Grand Affair
Expected to Surpass
Previous Events

BANQUET, SPORTS, ETC.

For several years the Rider College Alumni Association has staged a grand three-day Homecoming in January. The attendance has been increasing year by year.

Because of the vigorous work of the Alumni during the past two years, the attendance this year will be the largest ever. The Association has purchased from the State the Dormitories of the old State Normal School in Trenton, razed the buildings, with one exception, making way for a Gymnasium and constructing a brick-enclosed stadium on another plot. Naturally, Alumni in the East will make a special effort to inspect these operations and the new School of Business, as well as additions recently made at the main College building.

The first event will be at eight p. m., Friday, January 27, when Alumni teams will meet the Varsity basketball teams (both men and women's quintets).

The next morning will be devoted to inspection of the new buildings and field.

Sorority and Fraternity Reunion luncheons will be held at 12.30 p. m., Saturday.

The Alumni will elect its officers and two trustees to the College Board, trustees of this new institution now being selected by the Alumni. This meeting will be at 2.30 p. m., Saturday, in the College.

The real event is, of course, the Reunion Banquet and Ball which will be held at the Hotel Hildebrecht starting at 6.30 p. m.

Sunday, Sorority and Fraternity activities will last all day.

FASHION PARADE

By Orry-Kelly
(Famous Hollywood Stylist Writing
For International News Service)

HOLLYWOOD — (INS) — The last place from which one would expect feminine fashions to emanate is a monastery. Yet three of the season's most exciting styles first saw the light of day in the cell of some medieval monk.

The newest of the monastic fashions is the very full dress silhouette. This is cut in one piece and on the bias. It falls in shapeless fullness from the shoulderline and achieves no smartness until girded in at the waistline. In the early days no doubt monks of all sizes wore garments cut from the same pattern. Except for length one of the new monastic dresses would fit almost any girl.

Howard Shoup will be the first to introduce the unusual new silhouette on the screen. In Warner Bros. "Words With Music" Gale Page will wear a beige wool jersey cut exactly like a religious robe except for its high round neck and long fitted sleeves. All fullness will be gathered in at the normal waistline with a belt made up of two heavy maroon cords. She will also have an oxford grey coat with long loose sleeves fashioned on the same lines.

Collars which can be converted into hoods have been a familiar part of the robes of some religious orders for countless centuries. Since the hatless vogue has struck Hollywood with such force these hood collars are extremely handy because a girl doesn't have to be bothered with a hat, yet she has one ready at a moment's notice. Ann Sheridan has all of her sports dresses equipped with these convenient collars while Jane Travis puts them on jackets and coats whether intended for sports or dress occasions.

Heavy-soled toeless sandals which struck Hollywood and the rest of the country as a very new style last spring have actually been worn by monks uninterruptedly since the tenth century. The fashion is still gaining momentum in evening shoes, but the monks would be surprised to view Hollywood's version of them.

ON THE SCREENS

BRISTOL
The only indictment that can be brought against the Republic Picture, "I Stand Accused," is that it is excellent entertainment, a delightful hour for all movie fans.
"I Stand Accused" is now entertaining audiences at the Bristol Theatre. This Republic drama takes two barristers, just out of college, and throws them upon the world. The two find that life hasn't been awaiting their genius, and that the profession is already overcrowded with capable attorneys. Robert Cummings, one of the young lawyers, seizes upon an opportunity to serve a gangster and then, finding how easy it is to earn big money for ignoring scruples, becomes an underworld mouthpiece. Tom Beck, his pal, sticks to honor and poverty while awaiting his break.

To millions of dotting fans throughout the world, Shirley Temple is the perfect ideal of the good little girl—beautiful but bright; bright but never precocious; sweet but never prissy. Never prissy, in particular. Because, as in every other healthy youngster, there is perhaps just the suggestion of mischief in Shirley's twinkling sense of humor.
In her latest picture, "Just Around The Corner," for instance, there is a scene where Franklin Pangborn, in the role of a sentimental apartment house manager, delivers a scorching tirade to Shirley and her boy friend, Bennie Bartlett. The scene was shot near a huge penthouse swimming pool and in the mist of Pangborn's speech, Shirley's face suddenly lighted up with an idea. Pangborn, sensing the trend of her thought, nervously edged away from the pool.
"Say," exclaimed Humorist J. P. McEvoy to the other script writers, "why not have Shirley and Bennie push 'Pang' into the pool?"
"That's just what I was thinking," said Shirley with enthusiasm. (It is not known what Mr. Pangborn said.)
So that's the way the scene was done, because, as Mr. McEvoy put it, "Audiences ought to get as big a kick out of seeing the bumbling Pangborn do a nose dive—fully and formally attired—as Shirley and Bennie would in being the cause of it."
But when it came to doing the actual pushing, Shirley and Bennie balked. "Couldn't you just let Mr. Pangborn sort of fall into the pool?" they asked.
"Nothing doing," said Director Irving Cummings. "It was your idea and it's a good one."
Afterwards Shirley and Bennie approached the dripping Pangborn and diffidently offered their apologies but he—real trouper that he is—laughed it off good naturedly.
Currently at the Grand Theatre, "Just Around The Corner" is a 20th Century-Fox production. The cast includes Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Amanda Duff, Bert Lahr, Bill Robinson and others. Darryl F. Zanuck in charge of production.

The Great Game of Politics

One was that his defeat in Michigan last November was due in large measure to his failure to enforce the law against the sit-down strikers in Michigan during the 1935 labor crisis in that State. For this he was both extravagantly praised and vigorously denounced. The belief, however, is that his course was directly inspired, if not dictated, by the President himself, with whom he was in constant telephonic communication during the crisis. This made his claims for consideration very great.

IN ADDITION, there was the ardent preference for him of the C. I. O. leaders, plus the fact that his political services in 1932 and 1936 more or less imposed an obligation upon the White House after he was beaten in 1938. In that campaign his own speeches and the President's personal plea stood him out as the most conspicuous Roosevelt candidate in the country. In other words, the defeated Mr. Murphy had to be taken care of—and in a big way. While there will be some opposition, his confirmation by the Senate, like that of Mr. Hopkins, seems fairly sure. The chief reason for antagonism would be the belief that in the Michigan strike he unduly played the C. I. O. game and gave encouragement to the illegal sit-down strategy.

FOR that, however, Mr. Roosevelt himself is generally held responsible. While this does not reveal Mr. Murphy as the great man some of his admirers claim, it rather relieves him of the indictment and explains the unusually strong Presidential campaign commendation. As for the "inner circle" group, while they grieve over this second blow to their laudable efforts to shove the likable Mr. Jackson up the political ladder, their grief is somewhat mitigated by knowledge that in passing by their choice the President did not listen to the poisonous advice of the despicable conservatives, a few of whom still hover futilely in the White House wings.

MR. MURPHY is no conservative—far from it. Nowhere is there a "forward-looking man" who more loudly proclaims his "liberalism" or who has been more glowingly eulogistic of the President. Perhaps the most convincing evidence of his whole-hearted New Dealism is in the few choice words he uttered to the reporters when told of his appointment. "To me," he said, "this is another chance to serve the people. It is a difficult job, but I would not have it otherwise. Each new task makes me more anxious than before to do faithful, intelligent work for the people I serve."

THIS IS in the best New Deal tradition. Uctuous, smug, reeking with righteousness, it accurately reflects the attitude of the New Deal job-holder—to wit, that he is free of all trace of the human selfishness which characterizes other men and is in politics at great personal sacrifice solely because of disinterested devotion to the welfare of the common man.

In general, politicians are not so bad a lot. When the competition and the emotional character of the voters are considered, a good deal of humbuggery can be forgiven. However, the hardest to stomach are those whose principal stock in trade is a Pecksniffian pretense to political piety.

BOOK 7 MATCHES
FOR WRESTLERS
AT BENSLEM

Five of The Bouts Will Take Place On Foreign
Mats
TWO ON HOME FLOOR
Schedule Will Open This Afternoon With Lower
Merion Grapplers

CORNWELLS HEIGHTS, Jan. 5—Coach George Reimer has announced a schedule of seven wrestling matches for his grapplers for the coming mat season. Of these seven matches, five are carded on foreign mats while the other two will be fought on the home floor.

In fact the Owls' wrestlers open their 1939 campaign this afternoon when they will tangle up with the Lower Merion grapplers on the latter's floor, after which they will engage with George School, Overbrook Blind School J. V., and Penn Charter School all away before they have their first match home with Cheltenham's J. V. outfit on Wednesday, January 25. Then they meet the Abington J. V.'s away on February 1, and close the season with George School at home on February 8. However, Coach Reimer hopes to add at least one or possibly two more matches on the card after the final meet with George School on February 8.

The Owl wrestlers have been drilling for over a month now and are set for their opening engagement with the Lower Merion grapplers this afternoon. Coach Reimer also has his matmen perform in exhibition matches among themselves during the halves of the basketball games to keep the crowd amused during intermission time.

Although such stars from the '38 combination as Frank Wharton and Alex Deans have departed from the squad, Coach Reimer still has his most outstanding performer of the entire group in Jack Scarborough back. Jack has yet to be beaten in his wrestling career at the Benslem school in any matches, either exhibition or competition. He wrestles in the 165-pound class. Others back from last year's squad include Bob Scarborough and Harvey Rigby, both of whom performed well last year.

Coach Reimer also announced and released his Junior Varsity basketball schedule of 12 contests. The J. V.'s open their campaign against Fallsington High on the latter's court in Trenton on Monday evening, January 9, and close the season against the Stanfield B. C. outfit on March 1.

EXPECT BIG CROWD AT BASKETBALL TONIGHT

In order to secure seats, basketball fans of this vicinity are requested to come early to the Italian Mutual Aid court tonight as the two deciding games of the first half will be played. Tonight will decide whether the Goodwill Hose Company will be the first half champs or whether the half ends in a triple deadlock.

A record-breaking crowd is expected when the four teams line-up for action. The crowd is anticipated to shatter the mark that existed in the basketball league playoffs of several years ago.

At the present reading, Goodwill stands on top of the league with five victories and a lone defeat. St. Ann's and the Hibernians follow closely behind with four wins and two losses. The remainder of the teams are out of the race.

But tonight, the Pikers meet St. Ann's and at the clip the purple and gold has been going, a great game is in store. The hoemen realize that in order to win the first half without a tie-off they must beat St. Ann's while a victory for St. Ann's and also the Hibernians means a triple deadlock for the three clubs.

Tonight's fracas will be a great defensive team, Goodwill, against a wonderful scoring combination, St. Ann's. Followers of the local loop know that the reason for the Goodwill team being perched on the top of the circuit is because of their ability to hold down their opponents from scoring. Every game the Third Warders have played has finished below par of the scoring of other loop games and all have been close.

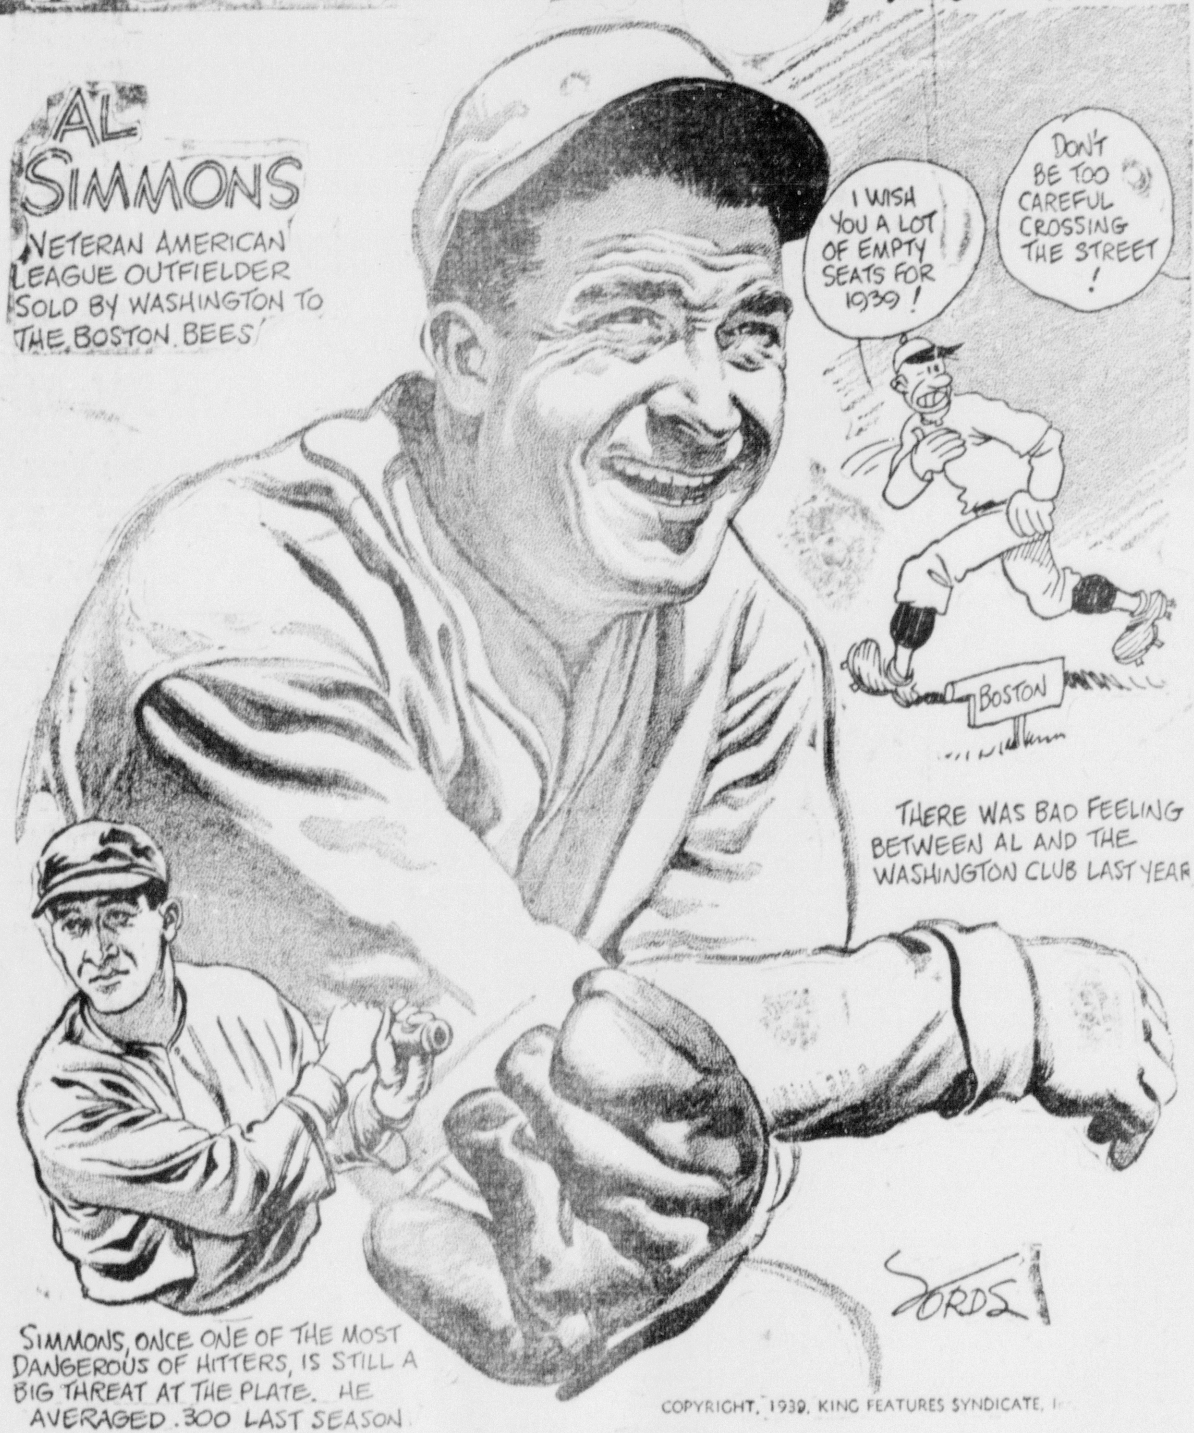

On the other hand, St. Ann's has some really sharp shooters in Herb Lawrence, Harry Berry, Ray Dorsey, Johnny Slaven and Pete DeLuca, besides its strongest reserve strength in Barbetta, Spadacino, Borne, Greenblatt and Sagolla. Last week this club broke the scoring record of the season against the Manhattan Soap Company five.

Goodwill's starting line-up will be the same five that carried them to victory throughout the season. Lawler and Profy will be at the guard posts with the lanky Charlie Hughes at center. The forwards will be Flatch and Tulio. Cooper and Lukens will be held in reserve.

The Manhattan team will attempt to snap out of its doldrums against the Hibernians who must win in order to have a mathematical chance of finishing the first half in a deadlock. Both of these clubs will use their regular line-ups.

First game will get under way at eight o'clock sharp.

MORRISVILLE GIRLS'
TEAM NOT SO GOOD

MORRISVILLE, Jan. 5 — Coach Dorothy Gish's girls' basketball team at Morrisville High School won't be so good this year unless they improve as the season progresses. At least that was the sentiment of the fans who watched the girls tap off their 1939 campaign against their Alumnae set on Tuesday evening.

The girls' shooting was far off the mark, and neither their passing nor guarding was particularly good. They will face their initial league test next Tuesday evening when they open their circuit season against the strong Southampton Canine aggregation on the Morrisville court.

CHIEF LITTLE WOLF
WINNER OVER MARTIN

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 5—Amidst a scene that sounded more like the Chicago stockyards than the smoke-filled Trenton Arena, Chief Little Wolf, Navajo Indian, turned terrors, defeated Richard (Ferdinand the Bull) Martin, in the feature wrestling match last night.

Martin, Trenton's roaring wrestler, won the first fall when he flopped on the Indian after 11 minutes and 30 seconds. Little Wolf used his famous Indian deathlock to bring the paunchy grunter to the mat in seven minutes and 45 seconds for the second fall.

Little Wolf was credited with the third fall by Referee Doc Gehman after the latter had repeatedly warned Martin from using unethical tactics on the Indian.

The bout that won the plaudits of the crowd, however, was the semi-windup between Karl (Killer) Davis, Tennessee rowdy, and Hans Steinke, German Oak. This affair went the required 30 minutes and wound up in a draw. Steinke and Davis treated the fans to a real wrestling match. They pulled and tugged at each other with most of the holds known to the game, and others they thought up on the spur of the moment.

Pat Corrian, popular Irishman, was declared the winner in the third match when the referee disqualified Angelo Leone, rowdy Italian, for tying up his opponent's legs with a piece of cord concealed in his trunks.

Frank Brown, Texas youngster, battled to a 30-minute draw with Christ Zaharias in the second bout. This match proved interesting to a spectator's viewpoint despite its tame ending.

Sammy Menacher, Bronx Hebrew, won the opener from Frenchy LaRue, half-pated Roumanian, with a body press after 29 minutes had elapsed.

Willing To Support
Children But Not Wife

ago. They have five children and are expecting another visit from the stork soon.

"John has a bad temper," she told Judge Boyer. "He has hit me numerous times and blackened my arms. He has a part-time job in a South Langhorne garage making $4.50 a week and we get $10.60 relief money each week."

The defendant asked permission to serve as his own attorney, and when he started to cross-examine his wife, he had difficulty in hiding his feelings and emotions.

"Never mind, answer the questions," he warned his wife. "I'm simply acting as an attorney now," he added.

"Come, come, we must get along with this case, answer the question," the defendant remarked to his mother-in-law, Mrs. Catherine Devlin, of South Langhorne, who refused to answer him, stating to the Court that she hated him and that he was "hottest-headed man on earth and knew it all."

Mullins, in a long discourse on the witness stand denied that he ever mistreated his family, but claimed that his wife did not know how to handle money and that she always nagged him, and when it was not her it was her mother. He told the Court that he had good jobs and made as high as $45 a week but that sinus trouble slowed him down a bit about two years ago when he was a WPA flagman.

Judge Boyer asked the wife and her mother what they wanted the Court to do with Mullins. "Do you want me to send him to jail," the Court asked. "Well, my husband and I have always supported them, we might as well continue in the same way, plus the relief money, if she can get that," Mrs. Mullins' mother answered.

Judge Boyer directed that Mullins pay to County Probation Officer Horace E. Gwinner the sum of $10.60 weekly, which is the relief check, just as soon as the authorities can make the check payable to Mrs. Mullins, not her husband, and that Mullins give bond in the sum of $500 approved by the Court to comply with the order. Just as soon as the order is complied with, Mullins will be released on his own recognizance and if he does not then support his family out of his own money after getting a decent job, another court order will follow.

An order of $5 a week was placed on Alexander McDonnell, Morrisville, by Judge Hiram H. Keller, after hearing testimony produced by witnesses in the case.

The case of Harry Johnson, of Hulmeville, charged with desertion and non-support, was continued until a later date. Testimony was heard before Judge Boyer. The Johnsons, Harry and his wife, Genevieve, were married 18 years.

Judge Keller continued the case of Hiram Smith, Frankford, charged by his wife, Edna, of Oakford, with desertion and non-support. The case was continued until February 6.

Judge Boyer also ordered the case of Alfred Clee, Jr., Somerton, continued for the time being. The defendant's wife, Ann Clee, 20, sought a court order for support for an unborn child. Testimony was heard in the case but it was not until near the end of the testimony that Mrs. Clee's real desire for support order was expressed at which time the Court assured her that the Court had no jurisdiction at this time.

Judge Keller directed that a support order of $5 a week be placed on Chester Zebrowski, of Trevose.

Court adjourned until next Monday morning, Jan. 9.

"Pin the Tail
on the Donkey"

When you were young, you played that timeless game. Blindfolded, you weaved your way to the painted donkey on the wall, and tried to pin his paper tail in approximately the right position. You hit his nose, his ear, his leg—or you missed completely, and your blind stab landed on the empty wall.

Do you still "pin the tail on the donkey" when you go shopping? Do you make your purchases "blindfolded," leaving your choice to chance? That is literally the "unenlightened" method. It wastes your time, your energy, your patience—and your money.

Don't buy haphazardly. Know beforehand what to buy, and where to buy it, and how much to pay for it. Read the newspaper advertisements! Scan the shopping columns; compare prices, compare values—decide upon your bargain. Then go directly to the store which advertises it; make your purchase—and be content!

No more hit-and-miss buying when you follow the advertisements. They lift the blindfold; they make it easier to find the best values.
